Let's Start!

Can you give me some dating advice?

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about relationships and personal dilemmas.
- I can talk about what I will have been doing.
- I can express what is necessary.

Ask your partner:

- Who do you go to for advice about dating?
- Do you give good dating advice? Why or why not?

Let's Explore!

Peter wants to make this a high caliber date.

* "High caliber" means that something is of top quality.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Host Annetta: As the listeners know, I have dipped my big toe into the online dating world and after this weekend, I will have gone on 10 first dates.

Dr. Dana: Have you found any possible true romance candidates?

Host Annetta: Not yet. They have all been nice guys. I really need to stop setting my expectations so high. Before the date, I imagine that we will have been sailing on the open ocean, or we will have been driving in the country or that we will have been sunning ourselves on some exotic beach prior to meeting the guy. But reality can never live up to my imagination.

I think I've just got to lower my expectations a tad. Let's just hope in a couple of months, I will have had a couple of high caliber dates and hopefully by this time next year, I will have at least found a boyfriend! Our first caller tonight is Peter from Boston.

Peter: Hi ...I'm calling about a problem I have. I wanted to send a text to put off a girl I don't like. Unfortunately, I sent it to a girl I have a real connection with.

Host Annetta: Oh man.

Dr. Dana: Have you been drinking Peter?

Peter: No, I just want to let this girl know that I am very sorry and I think I really like her. What should I do?

Host Annetta: You have to tell her your true feelings Peter. You mustn't hide how you feel inside. Otherwise you will go through life always in a cloud of self-doubt, always wondering if you made the right choice. Right Dr. Dana?

Dr. Dana: Peter are you taking any prescription medication?

Peter: What? ... No. So how do I do that?

Host Annetta: Well, you ought to tell her how much you like her right here, on Love Online. What is her name?

Peter: I don't know her name. I met her online. I just know her online handle.

Host Annetta: Hmmm. Ok. Well, just tell her now. Maybe she's a fan and is listening to the show.

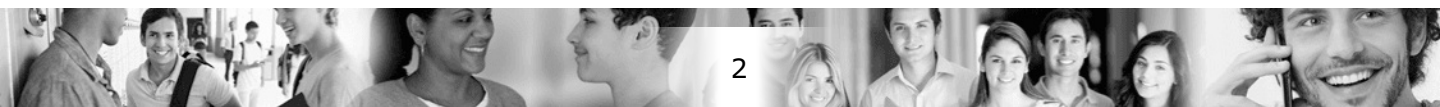

Dr. Dana: Diet soda. You mustn't drink diet soda.

Peter: What? No. Ok. SWEET GIRL. This Friday night, I will be at Bistro 88 at 8:30. I think if you come by we can talk and laugh and really get to know each other. I'll be carrying a large red rose. See you then.

Host Annetta: Good luck Peter. Bye.

Peter: Bye.

Dr. Dana: Peter remember you must not eat sugar. I think he'll be ok.

Let's Practice!

Dr. Dana gives some advice to Peter.

Instructions: Underline all the modals expressing necessity or lack of necessity in the sentences.

1. You have to tell her your true feelings, Peter.
2. You must not hide how you feel inside.
3. You ought to tell her how much you like her right here.
4. You mustn't drink diet soda.
5. Peter, remember you must not eat sugar.

Let's Practice!

Anetta talks to her viewers about lowering their expectations when trying to find someone online.

Instructions: Classify the sentences into the correct category.

1. Before the date, I imagine that we will have been sailing on the open ocean.
2. I will have gone on 10 dates.
3. We will have been sunning on some exotic beaches prior to meeting the guy.
4. I will have had a couple of high caliber dates.
5. By this time next year, I will have at least found a boyfriend!

Future Perfect Continuous Tense

You use the Future Perfect Continuous tense to talk about an action in the future that is unfinished by the time another action in the future starts.

When you use the Future Perfect Continuous, you can sometimes think of it as the Present Perfect Continuous, but instead of your viewpoint being in the present, it is in the future. With the Future Perfect Continuous, an action in the future is unfinished by the time another action in the future starts. It is most often used with an expression of time.

Structure:

subject+will have been + present participle

Example:

I will have been using this online dating website for 6 months by this time next week.
Vanessa will have been working at Bistro 88 for two years next month.

Examples:

- I will have been dating him for a year by this time next week.
- I will have been waiting for her for three hours by six o'clock.
- Before the date, I imagine that we will have been sailing on the open ocean, or we will have been driving in the country or that we will have been sunning ourselves on some exotic beach prior to meeting the guy.

Degrees of Necessity

You use the modals must and have (got) to to express necessities in the past or in the present.

You use the negative forms of these modals (needn't, don't have to) to express absence of necessity in the past or in the present.

Must refers to a necessary condition that comes from the subject and may be directed at the subject or the person the subject is talking to or about. It is used to express a strong necessity.

Example:

You must cut sugar out of your diet.

Have (got) to expresses external obligations, which come from outside of the subject. These may be rules and regulations over which the subject has no control. It is used to express necessity in a lower degree than with must.

Example:

You have to tell her your true feelings.

Learning Points

Absence of obligation is expressed with the negative form of have to, not with mustn't.

Example:

You don't have to drink so much coffee every day.

Absence of necessity can also be expressed by negative form of need. It is generally used as a main verb in the construction don't need to, but sometimes can be used as a modal, like needn't. The infinitive after the modal verb "needn't" is used without the particle "to".

Compare these sentences:

You don't need to rush into a relationship right now.

You needn't rush into a relationship right now.

Here is a list of modals of necessity:

Modal	Meaning	Example
have to	necessity/lack of necessity (negative)	You have to tell her. You don't have to make a reservation. must	strong necessity/prohibition (negative)	We must meet after eight.
ought to	strong advisability	You ought to tell her that you're not into her. should	strong advisability	You should have set this girl straight a long time ago.

Examples:

- You have to tell her your true feelings Peter.
- You mustn't hide how you feel inside.
- You ought to tell her how much you like her right here.
- You mustn't drink diet soda.
- Peter remember you must not eat sugar.
