Let's Start!

Let's talk about being stood up.

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about relationships and use colloquial expressions.
- I can express wishes and regrets.
- I can express what is not necessary.

Ask your partner:

- How do you feel before you go on a first date with someone?
- Who pays on a first date? Why?

Let's Explore!

I can't believe he stood you up. What a jerk!

* To "be stood up" means your partner failed to keep the date.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Server: Would the gentleman like some more wine?
Peter: I wish you wouldn't ask me that because the answer my good man is always yes.
Vanessa: Peter, I'm sorry. If only this didn't happen. Is there anything I can do?
Peter: And I definitely wish you wouldn't keep asking me that. I'm kidding, V. Thanks for your concern. I have a question for you though. How many times have you been stood up in the past?
Vanessa: A couple. Everyone has. I'm sorry this person has stolen your heart like this. She didn't have to be so cruel.
Peter: Man, I wish she wouldn't have stood me up this time. She didn't have to get my hopes up.
Vanessa: Maybe she just got cold feet? Did you send her a message?
Peter: Yes, several with my number. She didn't need to call, but a text message would be nice. I wish she would have messaged me at the very least. If only she had messaged me.
Vanessa: You know what? You didn't need to try so hard to explain yourself and make things right, but you did. Anyone who disrespects you this much is scum. Block her from your profile right now.
Peter: But Vanessa, I have to keep the lines of communication open. We shouldn't jump to conclusions. She might be lost or on her way. If only she texted me.
Vanessa: Peter, dump her ... now!
Peter: Ok. Ok. See? Happy?
Vanessa: Yes. Hello? Yes ... No, you didn't have to do that. They'll be fine ... They did what? Peter, I'll be back soon. Don't let this bring you down. Ok?
Peter: Ok. I wish I hadn't blocked her, maybe I can get her unblocked.

Let's Practice!

Vanessa tries to cheer Peter up.

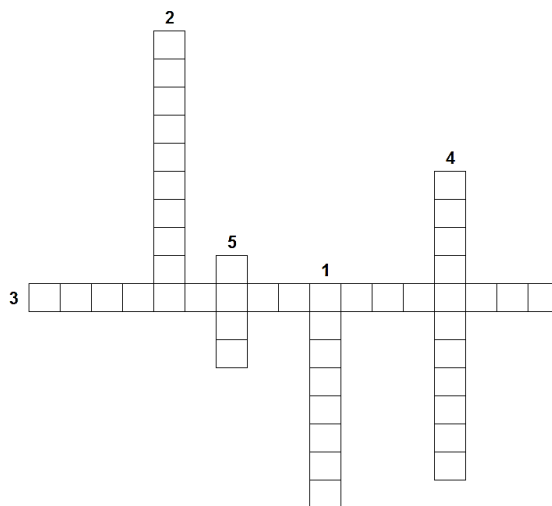

Instructions: Read the clues. Complete the crossword.

e.g. The results of the football game really brought me down.
- flake (adjective): a worthless person or group of people
e.g. She never does what she says she will. She is such a flake.
- to steal someone's heart (expression): to cause someone to fall in love with oneself.
e.g. My neighbor has really stolen my heart.

Learning Points

Expressing Wishes and Regrets

You use I wish or If only ... to express wishes and regret.

You use wish + would + infinitive to talk about things you would like to change about a situation or a person.

The verb wish introduces an idea. After wish, you use a verb in the past tense.

Structure:

Wish + Simple Past tense

Example: I wish she messaged me more often.

You use wish + would about other people who are doing (or not doing) something that you don't like and that you would like to change. You don't normally use it about yourself or about a situation that nobody can change.

Example:

I wish you wouldn't keep asking me that.

You use expressions like If only ... to express wishes in the present or regret about a past action.

Structure:

If only ... + Simple Past tense = wish

If only ... + Past Perfect = regret

If only I hadn't blocked her online! Now we can never go out again.*

Examples:

- I wish you wouldn't ask me that, because the answer, my good man, is always yes.
- I wish she would have messaged me at the very least.
- I wish I hadn't blocked her.
- I definitely wish you wouldn't keep asking me that.
- If only she had messaged me.
- If only this didn't happen

Learning Points

Expressing Absence of Necessity

You use the negative forms of the modals need to and have to to express absence of necessity in the past.

Absence of necessity is expressed with the negative form of have to, not with mustn't.
Example:

You don't have to date her if you don't like her. (it is not necessary to date her)

You mustn't date her. (it is necessary not to date her)

Absence of necessity can also be expressed by the negative form of need.

To express absence of necessity in the past, you use the structure: subject + didn't + have/need + infinitive

Example:

You didn't have to get so upset last night.

She didn't need to check her phone constantly during dinner.

Examples:

- She didn't have to be so cruel.
- She didn't need to call.
- She didn't have to get my hopes up.
- You didn't need to try so hard to explain yourself and make things right, but you did.
- No, you didn't have to do that.
