Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: It is an ideal spot for a first date!

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about relationships and personal traits.
- I can emphasize or contrast new information.
- I can use proper intonation with choice questions.

Ask your partner:

- Where is the perfect place to go for a first date? Why?
- Do you have a special place you like to go on a first date? Where is it? Why do you like to go there?

Let's Explore!

Jessica is a sweet, kind, beautiful person. She is a keeper.

* "A keeper" is a person you should marry in the near future.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Peter: So I think I found someone I like.
- Vanessa: Good for you. Is she introverted or extroverted?
- Peter: Well, she describes herself as fun-loving, light hearted and upbeat. However, she also claims that she is quite introverted and doesn't need to be the life of the party.
- Vanessa: Which does she like better shy guys or outgoing guys?
- Peter: She says shy is ok. She also likes guys who are reliable, intelligent and have a good sense of humor. We laugh at each others jokes and her humor is very self-effacing which I like.
- Vanessa: Cool!
- Peter: She's also completely into comic books and we had a long conversation about superheroes.
- Vanessa: I love it when nerds unite. Does she like Batman or Superman?
- Peter: I'll have you know she likes Superman, Batman, and the Flash.
- Vanessa: Well. She's a keeper.
- Peter: I utterly love her writing. It's so descriptive, and elegant while at the same time conversational.
- Vanessa: She sounds great. What does she look like? Does she have blonde hair or brown hair?
- Peter: I truly don't know. She didn't have a picture up on her profile.
- Vanessa: That's ok. But she knows what you look like right?
- Peter: No, I took down all my pictures. I prefer to be a man of mystery.
- Vanessa: With your dating record it should be man of misery. What's her name?
- Peter: I don't know her name.
- Vanessa: What's her profile name?
- Peter: Her name is SWEETGIRL. Cool, huh?
- Vanessa: Oh yeah. So, when are you guys going to meet?
- Peter: We are talking about getting together, but we haven't made a plan yet. We were thinking Wednesday for lunch, Thursday for dinner or something on Friday night.
- Vanessa: Maybe bring her by the Bistro on Friday. I'll bend over backwards to make you look like a big shot.
- Peter: Good idea! I'll text her and set it up.

Let's Practice!

Vanessa wants to know more about Peter's mystery girl.

Contrastive Stress

Intonation in English can be used to highlight certain parts of speech, to emphasize new information, or to contrast information. The words or phrases you choose to stress can provide added meaning to the sentence.

Contrastive stress is used to point out the difference between one object and another. Contrastive stress tends to be used with determiners such as 'this, that, these and those'.

Example:

Does she like Batman or Superman?

Does she have blonde hair or brown hair?

I think I prefer this online profile.

Examples:

- Is she introverted or extroverted?
- Does she like Batman or Superman?
- Does she have blonde hair or brown hair?
- Is she tall or short?
- Do you prefer this one or that one?
- Did you hear that she actually turned down the job?
- They had twins! Can you imagine!

Intonation in Choice Questions

All choice questions have an 'or' in them. They are either open or closed. You use different intonation patterns for open and closed questions. They also require different kinds of answers.

You can think of an open choice question as a yes or no question. There are two possible intonation patterns.

For example:

Does she like Batman ↗ or Superman ↗?

Does she like Batman or Superman ↗?

In this case, the possible answers could be yes or no answers:

Yes, she likes Batman.

Yes, she likes both.

No, she doesn't like either.

No, but she likes Spiderman.

A closed choice question has limited choices. It cannot be answered by yes or no answers, and implies a choice between one option or the other.

For example:

Does she like Batman ↗ or Superman ↘?

In the case, the possible answers could be:

She likes Batman.

She likes Superman.

She likes both.

Neither.

Examples:

- Does she have blonde hair or brown hair?
- Is she introverted or extroverted?
- Does she like shy guys or outgoing guys better?
- Does she like tall guys or short guys?
- Is he into rock music or classical music?
