Let's Start!

Let's talk about personality traits!

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about relationships and personal dilemmas.
- I can talk about imaginary situations.
- I can express what is not necessary.

Ask your partner:

- Are there any personality traits that you like or admire?
- Do you think it is possible for someone to change their personality? Why or why not?

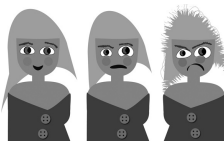

Let's Explore!

Wow! Things went from 0 to 60 really fast.

* Going from "0 to 60" means that something escalated quickly.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Vanessa: Did you read Sally's blog?
Peter: Yeah, she's getting really good ...
Vanessa: What a life. If I won the lottery, I would definitely travel the world writing ... and eating ... and drinking. So how is the online dating scene?
Peter: Um. Weird. I have a real psycho contacting me. SWEDEGURL. She is ... aggressive.
Vanessa: What do you mean?
Peter: Here take a peek.
Vanessa: ... Oh my! ... OH MY! ... WOW!
Peter: I know right.
Vanessa: Well, she must really like you. She went from 0 to 60 pretty quick, but that is a little overboard.
Peter: Way too much. I'm not that guy. This is going way too fast.
Vanessa: Have you met her?
Peter: No, and I don't think I want to. I can't date someone like this. I would be in the hospital in a week if I dated someone like her. I don't need someone like this. I have to date someone who is sweet and wholesome and wants to take it slow.
Vanessa: Didn't you put that on your profile?
Peter: No, I put I am down for anything. I thought I would meet more people that way.
Vanessa: Peter! I told you you should be specific. You don't have to be picky, but you should be very clear about what you want. If I weren't specific, I would have had so many losers contacting me.
Peter: What should I do?
Vanessa: Well, you don't have to date her. If I were you, I would tell her that you are just not into those sort of things. You don't need to stay in contact with her.
Peter: Yeah.
Vanessa: Also, if I were you, I'd change your pictures, they don't even look like you.
Peter: OK. I might just take them down.
Vanessa: Lastly, you mustn't use your real name as your profile name. PETER 123. Change it! Now!
Peter: Ok V.

Learning Points

The Present Unreal Conditional

The Present Unreal Conditional is used to talk about what you generally would do in imaginary situations. The result of the condition is unclear and impossible to predict with certainty.

The Present Unreal Conditional is also called the second Conditional.

You use the structure:

If... Simple Past, would+verb
or Would+verb ... if ... Simple Past.

Example: If I won the lottery, I would definitely travel the world.

The outcome is unclear, and it is impossible to know whether you will win the lottery in the future or not.

If I were you, I would tell her that you are not into online dating.

You use If I were you ... to give a strong piece of advice.

Examples:

- If I won the lottery, I would definitely travel the world writing ... and eating and drinking.
- I would be in the hospital in a week if I dated someone like her.
- If I weren't specific, I would have had so many losers contacting me.
- If I were you, I would tell her that you are just not into those sort of things.
- If I were you, I'd change your pictures.

Expressing Absence of Necessity

You use the negative forms of the modals need to and have to to express absence of necessity in the past or in the present.

Absence of necessity is expressed with the negative form of have to, not with mustn't.

Example: You don't have to date her if you don't like her.

Absence of necessity can also be expressed by negative form of need. It is generally used as a main verb in the construction don't need to.

Examples:

- You don't need to stay in contact with her.
- You don't have to be picky.
- You don't have to date her.
- I don't need someone like this.
- You don't need to date people you don't like.
