Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about what I will have been doing and what I will have done.
- I can talk about hopes and wishes and regrets.
- I can express what is and isn't necessary.

Ask your partner:

- If you could go on a date with anyone in the world, who would it be with? Why?
- What famous person would you not want to date? Why?

Let's Explore!

I'm going out to the pub to drown my sorrows.

* "To drown your sorrows" means to drink heavily.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Vanessa: How's my wholesome Peter? If only you weren't so wholesome.
- Peter: Good. Maybe a tad tipsy. I think I have to go home. I have to finish this and then I'll be heading for the door.
- Vanessa: Peter, you don't have to drink it.
- Peter: In a minute, I'll have finished this glass of wine and then I'll be grabbing a taxi.
- Vanessa: Listen, at midnight, I will have shut down the bar, cleaned the kitchen and counted all the money. I could give you a ride then.
- Peter: That's ok. I'll take a cab.
- Vanessa: If only we weren't so busy.
- Peter: I wish I didn't need a ride home, but that's ok. I have plenty of money.
- Vanessa: Yes you do Mr. big shot.
(Vanessa leaves)
- Peter: What a comedy of errors.
- Amy: Hey stranger! Drowning your sorrows or just taking them for a swim?
- Peter: I wish they would drown ... Amy! Wow! How are you?
- Amy: Great! I was just finishing dinner with some clients and I was just about to leave, so I thought I'd come over and say hello.
- Peter: How is the job?
- Amy: Really busy. The last time we spoke, I was just about to start studying again.
- Peter: You didn't mention that.
- Amy: Really? I have to be certified in order to be a life coach and then the board told me I must also get this other certificate, so I went overboard and tried to get them both. I didn't tell you? Sorry, I wish I had told you that.
- Peter: That's ok. Are you finished now?
- Amy: If only I were finished. I'm doing some other work online, I'll be doing it for a little while longer, but by next summer I will have finished.
- Peter: Cool.
- Amy: Listen Peter. You ought to give me your phone number. On second thought, you don't have to, here's my card. We should go out again, ok? I have got to run. Call me.
- Peter: Looks like tomorrow, I'll be smiling ear to ear after all.

Let's Practice!

Peter feels very sad.

Instructions: Circle the correct word to complete the sentence. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. I think I have to / has to go home.

Learning Points

Expressing Wishes and Regrets

You use I wish or If only ... to express wishes and regrets.

You use wish + would + infinitive to talk about things you would like to change about a situation or a person.

The verb wish introduces an idea. After wish, you use a verb in the past tense.

Structure:

Wish + Simple Past tense

Example: I wish I wasn't so busy.

You use wish + would about other people who are doing (or not doing) something that you don't like and that you would like to change. You don't normally use it about yourself or about a situation that nobody can change.

Example:

I wish my sorrows would drown after a long swim!

You use expressions like If only ... to express wishes in the present or regret about a past action.

Structure:

If only ... + Simple Past tense = wish

If only ... + Past Perfect = regret

If only you had told me that you wanted to get that certificate!*

Examples:

- I wish I didn't need a ride home.
- I wish they would drown.
- I wish I had told you that.
- If only you weren't so wholesome.
- If only we weren't so busy.
- If only I were finished.

Learning Points

Expressing Necessity and Absence of Necessity

You use the modals must and have (got) to to express necessity.

You use the negative forms of the modals need to and have to to express absence of necessity.

Must refers to a necessary condition that comes from the subject and may be directed at the subject or the person the subject is talking to or about. It is used to express a strong necessity.

Example:

I must set up this online profile by tomorrow.

An ideal date must include good food.

Have (got) to expresses external obligations. These do not come from the subject, but from a source outside it. These may be rules and regulations over which the subject has no control. It is used to express necessity in a lower degree than with must.

You use the negative form of have to to show an absence of necessity. You do not use mustn't.

Example:

My ideal date doesn't have to be well off.

Absence of necessity can also be expressed by the negative form of need. It is generally used as a main verb in the construction don't need to, but sometimes can be used as a modal, like needn't. The infinitive after the modal verb "needn't" is used without the particle "to".

Compare these sentences:

You don't need to rush into a relationship right now.

You needn't rush into a relationship right now.

To express absence of necessity in the future, you use the structure: subject + won't + have/need + infinitive.

Example:

You won't have to worry about online dating once you get married.

If you set up your online profile properly, you won't need to sift through tons of irrelevant messages.

To express absence of necessity in the past, you use the structure: subject + didn't + have/need + infinitive.

Example:

You didn't have to get so upset last night.*

Learning Points

She didn't need to check her phone constantly during dinner.

Here is a list of modals of necessity:

Modal	Meaning	Example
have to	necessity/lack of necessity (negative)	You have to tell her. You don't have to make a reservation. must	strong necessity/prohibition (negative)	We must meet after eight.
ought to	strong advisability	You ought to tell her that you're not into her.
should	strong advisability	You should have set this girl straight a long time ago.

Examples:

- You don't have to drink it.
- I have to be certified in order to be a life coach.
- I must also get this other certificate.
- I think I have to go home. I have to finish this.
- You ought to give me your phone number.
- You don't have to, here's my card.
